POET ICAL. THE LAST MEETING.

They met amid the gazing crowd,
When careless eyes were on the two;
Her soul with hopeless grief was bowed,
Yet, to a warning instinct time,
She met unmoved his pleading eyes,
He took her hand and let it fall—
A word, and she had passed him by,
To those around them that was all.

It did not seem a litter task
To meet so calmly—these who had
Been lovers once; yet 'neath the mask
